Snow on Loose Ice (Lake Yunoko)

Kegon Falls (The Amount of Water Falling 0.1t/sec)

● Nature

On February 8th, I visited Lake Karikomi, many footprints were left on the frozen lake, but the ice was so loose and sherbet-like that I could even grab it with my bare hands, which was dangerous to walk on. This kind of situation is seen more often at Lake Yunoko.

The area that looks like a snow field is actually a frozen lake, so you need to be extremely careful to step on.

Since February 13th, even in Yumoto, the maximum temperature has risen to nearly +10° C every day, and the snow and ice have melted rapidly.

Lake Chuzenji and Kegon Falls also have low water volume due to the warm sunny weather.
