With the red-brick Tokyo Station building as a stunning backdrop, Gyoko-dori will be adorned with 250 three-dimensional Japanese umbrella illuminations, creating a timeless scene that blends Edo and modern times.

*In case of rain, the event will be interrupted or canceled.
*The lighting of the Japanese umbrellas on January 17 will start around 5:15 PM as part of the ceremony event.
*The lighting of the Japanese umbrellas on January 18 and 19 will start at 5:00 PM.

To introduce the existence and history of the "daimyo", leading feudal lords, who actually had residences in the locations of the buildings on Marunouchi-Nakadori Ave. during the final days of the Edo shogunate, the family crests of these daimyo families will be displayed on streetlight flags at those locations. This aims to help visitors discover the traditional Japanese colors and sophisticated Japanese patterns.
