Snowshoe courses marked with colored ribbons

Lake Yunoko (on January 6th)

(It looks like a seal, isn't it?)*

● Nature

There have been many snowy days since the end of the year, and the Yumoto area has had a decent snowfall. Some of snowshoe courses starting from Yumoto are open from January 10th, and the courses are marked with colored ribbons depending on the course.

On January 11th, we received a request for a guided snowshoe tour and provided the tour. It seemed like they fully enjoyed the snowy forest.

● Information

The second and third chairlifts at Yumoto Ski Resort have also been in operation since January 12th, and all courses are now open for skiing.
