Japan will be part of the world premiere project for the latest solo live performance film by David Gilmour (born 1946, age 79), who has been the guitarist, singer, and leader of Pink Floyd since joining the band in 1968.

The film, "David Gilmour LIVE AT THE CIRCUS MAXIMUS, ROME," captures the special concert at Circus Maximus (Italian: Circo Massimo), an ancient Roman racing stadium in Italy, the country also home to the ruins of Pompeii, where Gilmour had played with Pink Floyd and as a solo artist.

To celebrate the Blu-ray/DVD release of the live footage of such a historic concert, the film will be shown in cinemas worldwide for a limited period. Here in Japan, its one-night only IMAX® world premiere will take place at Grand Cinema Sunshine Ikebukuro on Wednesday, September 17, followed by 19 IMAX® theaters in 17 cities nationwide on Thursday, September 18.

Also announced is that Gavin Elder, the director of this film, will make an urgent trip to Japan to share the stage with music journalist Masa Ito as a special guest at Grand Cinema Sunshine Ikebukuro on September 18. Elder has worked with David Gilmour for over a decade to co-produce visual works; he is also the director of the 2019 film "David Gilmour LIVE AT POMPEII."

Using state-of-the-art technology for both audio and visual, the film presents itself with the premium quality available at this time. Pink Floyd's signature lighting, dubbed "the art of light," is also alive at Gilmour's show.
